QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether Petitioner waived his Batson v. Kentucky challenge to the peremptory jury strikes utilized by the Respondent by failing to raise his objection until after the remainder of the venire had been discharged and a jury impanelled?

2. Whether Petitioner established a prima facie case of purposeful discrimination concerning the use of peremptory jury strikes by the Respondent so as to require Respondent to explain those strikes under the shifting burden test of Batson v. Kentucky?

3. Whether O.C.G.A. § 19-7-45 which requires blood-testing upon request of any party to a paternity action initiated by the Respondent is consistent with the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses of the United States Constitution, especially in light of the federal mandate for such legislation, see 42 U.S.C. § 666(a)(5)(B)?

42 U.S.C. § 602(a)(27) 1

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

In order to receive federal financial participation for its public welfare program of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), the Georgia Department of Human Resources (hereafter "Respondent") must maintain a child support enforcement program in accordance with Title IV-D of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. § 651 et seq. 42 U.S.C. § 602(a)(27). Respondent is the public administrative agency in the State of Georgia charged with implementing Title IV-D. The agency undertakes to provide child support enforcement services either upon the request of a person not receiving AFDC, or automatically whenever a custodial parent is an AFDC recipient.

On November 28, 1990, Ms. Sonja Cassell applied for AFDC benefits on behalf of her son, Daniel B. Cassell. (A38). Upon application for these benefits, Ms. Cassell was required to supply the name of the putative father of her son and she indicated that Alan D. Tucker (hereafter "Petitioner") was the father of the child. (A39). After investigating the circumstances of this claim, Respondent commenced a civil action against Petitioner in the Superior Court of Glynn County seeking to determine his paternity of Daniel B. Cassell, to establish a child support obligation, and to recover amounts of federal and state funds expended in support of the child.

During the course of the paternity proceedings, Respondent sought a blood test to discover scientifically the likelihood that Petitioner was the father of Daniel B. Cassell. (Petition, p. A6). The trial court granted this request over Petitioner's objections that he had received a vasectomy and could not be the father of the child, and rejected Petitioner's contention that Georgia's blood testing statute, O.C.G.A. § 19-7-45, violated due process and equal protection principles. (Petition, pp. A6, A10).

With respect to Petitioner's claim that a vasectomy occurred, testimony at trial revealed that the doctor allegedly performing the procedure was unable to locate the medical file documenting the procedure. The doctor also admitted to being a personal friend of the Petitioner, and to having been himself accused of fathering a child out of wedlock. (A43). As for the scientific evidence, based upon six DNA probes performed on the blood samples of Petitioner, Sonja Cassell, and Daniel Cassell, a medical expert at trial determined that Petitioner was 206,624 times more likely to be the father of Daniel Cassell than a randomly selected North American caucasian male, or a probability of paternity in excess of 99.99 percent. (A40-41).

After considering all the evidence at trial, the jury determined unanimously that Petitioner was the father of Daniel Cassell. (A47). Based on this determination, the jury awarded child support payments to Sonja Cassell. (A47). Due to the fact that Respondent failed to request AFDC reimbursement in the charge to the jury, the trial court ruled that Respondent could not recover its welfare expenditures. (Petition, pp. A22-23). The trial court entered its judgment based upon the jury's verdict. (Petition, p. A20). Petitioner's subsequent appellate challenges to this judgment in the Court of Appeals of Georgia and the Supreme Court of Georgia were denied. (Petition, pp. A25-29). This Petition followed.

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

Petitioner seeks a writ of certiorari from this Court on two grounds. He first contends that the Respondent exercised its peremptory challenges at the trial of this action in a discriminatory manner so as to exclude males from the jury in violation of Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79 (1986). He next contends that a statute of the State of Georgia which provides for blood testing in paternity actions is unconstitutional. He argues that because courts have discretion to order blood tests in cases brought by private parties, but no discretion to order testing in cases initiated by Respondent, that he is deprived of due process and equal protection of the laws. Both contentions lack merit.

The Petitioner waived any defect in the composition of the jury by failing to object to the Respondent's use of its peremptory challenges until after the venire was discharged by the trial court. Under decisions of the Georgia appellate courts, and a majority of federal circuit courts, an objection is timely only if made prior to the dismissal of the venire so that the trial court will have an opportunity to correct any alleged error in the composition of the jury by substituting another jury member if necessary. By waiting until all possible alternate jurors were dismissed, and the selected jury discharged, to make his challenge, Petitioner failed to timely preserve his objection.

Even assuming arguendo that Petitioner has not waived his Batson challenge, he failed to raise an inference of purposeful discrimination sufficient to require the Respondent to explain the use of its peremptory challenges. Petitioner used all six of his challenges to strike female jurors from the panel. Respondent used its challenges to strike five males and one female from the panel. The resulting jury was composed of four males, eight females, and one male alternate juror. The percentage of males in the venire compared to the number who were chosen to serve on the jury is virtually identical. Moreover, the trial transcript reflects gender neutral reasons for striking three of the five males who were excluded from the jury. Taking into account all the relevant circumstances, Petitioner failed to establish a prima facie case of purposeful discrimination and therefore consistent with Batson the burden did not shift to Respondent to explain its use of peremptory challenges.

Neither has Petitioner demonstrated any reason why the Georgia blood testing statute should be struck down as unconstitutional. The Georgia legislation was adopted in response to a Congressional directive that all states enact mandatory blood testing in their federally funded child support enforcement programs. Georgia complied with this directive. The challenged statute does not impact any fundamental right of Petitioner, nor does it affect a suspect class. Accordingly, the statute must be upheld if rationally related to any legitimate state purpose. Making blood testing available in cases where public resources are involved assures that scientifically reliable evidence of paternity is obtained at an early stage of the proceedings thereby conserving litigation resources.

With respect to Petitioner's due process challenge, blood testing is not so significant an invasion of the body to implicate substantive due process as this Court has held. Procedural due process was afforded to Petitioner since the order for blood testing was entered only after notice and a hearing. As to equal protection, the challenged statute operates uniformly upon all parties to the paternity action, leaving the only valid equal protection comparison between actions initiated by Respondent and those initiated by a private party. Unlike actions brought by private parties which may arise from spurious or groundless allegations, actions initiated by the Respondent are undertaken only after careful investigation and to further the public interest in legitimacy and support of children. Distinguishing actions brought by private plaintiffs and actions brought by Respondent on the foregoing grounds is eminently rational.

REASONS FOR DENYING THE PETITION

I. The Appellate Courts Of Georgia Properly Declined To Overturn The Superior Court's Finding That Respondent's Exercise Of Peremptory Challenges Was Consistent With Batson v. Kentucky.

A. Petitioner Waived His Challenge To The Peremptory Strikes Utilized By Respondent Where He Failed To Raise His Objection Before The Jury Was Impanelled And The Remainder Of The Venire Discharged.

In Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79 (1986), this Court first recognized the fundamental principle that the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution forbids the exclusion of persons from jury service based solely upon their race. Although Batson initially encompassed only criminal trials and actions by a prosecutor, the Court has since expanded the equal protection guaranties to jury strikes by criminal defendants, Georgia v. McCollum, ___ U.S. ___, 112 S.Ct. 2348, 120 L.Ed.2d 33, (1992), and jury strikes in civil cases, Edmonson v. Leesville Concrete Co., 500 U.S. ___, 111 S.Ct. 2077, 114 L.Ed.2d 660 (1991). Very recently, the Court extended those protections to peremptory jury strikes targeting one gender. J.E.B. v. Alabama, ___ U.S. ___, ___ S.Ct. ___, ___ L.Ed.2d ___, Case No. 92-1239, April 19, 1994. Despite the broadening reach of Batson in modern jurisprudence, one unyielding prerequisite to its application remains: a timely objection by the person seeking its benefit. Batson, 476 U.S. at 99.

Largely, this Court has left to state and federal trial courts the task of determining whether a Batson challenge has been timely presented. Batson, 476 U.S. at 99. Although the federal circuit courts of appeal have not spoken with a uniform voice in deciding the time a Batson challenge must be asserted, a clear majority of those courts require a Batson objection to be made at the close of voir dire or before the venire is released.[1] The Supreme

[1] The Third, Fifth, and Eighth Circuits have held that a Batson challenge must be raised either at the conclusion of voir dire or before the venire is dismissed and trial commences, Government of the Virgin Islands v. Forte, 806 F.2d 73, 75-76 (3rd Cir. 1986); United States v. Maseratti, 1 F.3d 330, 335 (5th Cir. 1993); United States v. Parham, 16 F.3d 844, 847 (8th Cir. 1994); whereas the Ninth Circuit has permitted a challenge to be raised even after the jury is sworn, United States v. Thompson, 827 F.2d 1254, 1257 (9th Cir. 1987). The Eleventh Circuit has not made a definitive statement about when a Batson challenge is untimely, although it did permit one such challenge after a venire was dismissed due to the absence of counsel immediately

Court of Georgia requires that a Batson challenge be raised before the jurors who are selected to serve in a criminal case are sworn. Georgia v. Sparks, 257 Ga. 97, 355 S.E.2d 658 (1987). Accord, Greene v. Georgia, 260 Ga. 472, 396 S.E.2d 901 (1990). The purpose in requiring the challenge to be made at this time is to afford the trial court "an opportunity to determine whether there has been a violation of the defendant's constitutional rights under Batson and, if so, to remedy that violation and proceed to the trial of the case." Sparks, 257 Ga. at 98, 355 S.E.2d at 659. This Court has described that requirement as "a sensible rule". Ford v. Georgia, 498 U.S. 411, 422 (1991).

A somewhat different situation is presented in a civil case however. Unlike in a criminal case where two oaths are required, see O.C.G.A. §§ 15-12-132, 15-12-139, civil cases in Georgia require only one oath prior to voir dire. Strozier v. Clark, 206 Ga. App. 85, 424 S.E.2d 368 (1992). As a result, there can be no procedural requirement that a Batson challenge be made prior to the jurors being sworn since the jury has not been selected at the time the oath is administered. (A10). Nevertheless, the purpose of a timely objection remains the same, to allow the trial court a meaningful opportunity to correct any alleged defect. Strozier, 206 Ga. App. at 86, 424 S.E.2d at 370.[2] The following jury selection, United States v. Rodriguez, 917 F.2d 1286, 1288 n.4 (11th Cir. 1990), but see United States v. Chandler, 996 F.2d 1073, 1102 (11th Cir. 1993) (supporting the majority view).

[2] In Strozier, the court of appeals concluded that the Batson objection was timely where presented "subsequent to selection and prior to the commencement of the trial." Id. However, the court in that case was not presented with the situation here

Georgia Court of Appeals provided civil litigants with concrete guidelines in Calhoun v. Purvis, 206 Ga. App. 565, 425 S.E.2d 901 (1992) (en banc). The court concluded that the Batson challenge must be raised "no later than would preserve the opportunity to correct any violation without resetting the trial." Calhoun, 206 Ga. App. at 568, 425 S.E.2d at 904. In Calhoun, the motion should have been raised before the jury selected and the jurors not selected were released.[3]

Petitioner made two challenges to the jury selection process in this case. He first challenged the array from which the jury panel was drawn arguing that males had been disproportionately excluded. (A9). This challenge was raised before voir dire of the jury panel began. (A9). Petitioner offered only the jury list from the court clerk's office in support of his claim, and the trial court denied the challenge. (A9-10).[4]

Thereafter, the jury panel was sworn by the clerk and voir dire was permitted. (A10). At the conclusion of the voir dire, three jurors were excused for cause and both Petitioner and Respondent exercised their peremptory strikes to select a jury. (A12-13; 32). After all strikes had where the remaining venire members were excused by the trial court and thus unable to participate in any corrective action which might have been deemed appropriate.

[3] Although the challenge in Calhoun was untimely under the guidelines announced in that appeal, the court applied its reasoning prospectively and remanded the case for a hearing on the Batson issue.

[4] Petitioner did not pursue his challenge to the array in subsequent proceedings, or before this Court, and therefore this claim of error must be deemed abandoned.

been made, the trial court excused those jurors who had not been selected and impanelled the jury. (A33-34). The jurors who were released were told that they did not have any further jury service obligation for that trial week. (A10; 34). After preliminary instructions, the selected jurors were also excused and told to report a day later for the trial. (A34-35).

After all jurors had been released, Petitioner's counsel made a motion for confidentiality in light of the nature of the proceedings. (A35). After that motion was denied, Petitioner's counsel raised for the first time an objection to the peremptory strikes that had been exercised by Respondent's counsel. (A36). This objection was made after the remainder of the venire was released, a jury impanelled, and the selected jurors excused. (A34-36). Consequently, Petitioner's challenge was untimely under Calhoun v. Purvis, 206 Ga. App. 565, 425 S.E.2d 901 (1992) (en banc).

To promote judicial economy, Georgia trial courts must be permitted to limit Batson challenges to a time when there remains a realistic opportunity to correct any error which may be urged upon the court. Once the remainder of the venire was released in this case, it became impossible to address Petitioner's challenge without recalling those jurors not selected or assembling a new panel to alter the composition of the jury seated to serve. Creating such needless delay is the precise reason why a party is required to raise a Batson challenge prior to the release of the jury panel. Petitioner waived his challenge here and therefore the writ of certiorari should be denied.[5]

B. Petitioner Failed To Establish A Prima Facie Case Of Discrimination Sufficient To Trigger A Batson Hearing Where The Gender Composition Of The Panel And The Gender Composition On The Selected Jury Was Virtually Identical.

Applying this Court's decision in Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79 (1986), to the present facts, it becomes apparent that Petitioner failed to establish that the Respondent's exercise of its peremptory challenges constituted a prima facie case of discrimination sufficient to warrant shifting the burden to Respondent to explain those strikes. This is not a case such as J.E.B. v. Alabama, ___ U.S. ___, ___ S.Ct. ___, ___ L.Ed.2d ___, Case No. 92-1239, April 19, 1994, where a public agency attempted to uphold its use of discriminatory strikes by arguing that gender was not a protected class under the Fourteenth Amendment. Rather, Respondent utilized its peremptory challenges in a non-discriminatory manner as evidenced by the composition of the jury selected in this case.

Court records indicate that the jury panel in this case was composed of 30 members. (A33). Of this number, 12 prospective jurors were male, and 18 prospective jurors were female. (A12-13; 32-33; 49-50). During general voir dire of the jury by the court, two male jurors indicated that they could not guarantee their impartiality due to prior knowledge of the case. (A11-13). Although the parties raised no challenge to these individuals, the court excused them for cause. (A12-13). A female juror was also excused for cause at the request of the Petitioner. (A32). After jurors struck for cause were removed from the venire, the gender composition of the remaining jurors was 10 males and 17 females. Males comprised 37 percent of the venire from which jurors were to be selected.

[5] Neither is this an appropriate case for this Court to excuse Petitioner's procedural default under the "plain error" doctrine. See Clark v. Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock, 937 F.2d 934, 938-940 (4th Cir. 1991).

Upon the conclusion of voir dire, the parties exercised their peremptory challenges upon the remaining 27 potential jurors. Petitioner struck six female jurors from the panel. (A33; 51).[6] Respondent struck five male jurors and one female juror from the panel. (A33; 51).[7] Accordingly, the selected jury consisted of 4 male jurors, 8 female jurors, and 1 male alternate juror. Thus, the selected jury was composed of 33 percent males, or 38 percent males if the alternate juror is included in the calculation. Comparing the composition of the potential panel, 37 percent male, with the composition of the actual panel, 33 percent male, yields a difference of 4 percent, hardly a resounding condemnation of Respondent's peremptory challenges. In keeping with this Court's admonition that determining the existence of a prima facie

[6] Apparently, Petitioner saw no conflict with Batson in using all six of his peremptory challenges against persons of the same gender.

[7] The ordering of the strikes by Respondent was four males, then one female, and finally one male. (A33; 51). Of the first four males struck, the record reflects gender neutral reasons for strikes used against three of them, as discussed infra.

case under Batson involves a review of the relevant circumstances, not just the strikes themselves, the trial court could easily have concluded that Petitioner had failed to establish a prima facie case of purposeful discrimination against males in using peremptory challenges. See Batson, 476 U.S. at 96-97; United States v. Allison, 908 F.2d 1531, 1538 (11th Cir. 1990). The trial court's determination is entitled to great deference. Lingo v. Georgia, 263 Ga. 663, 437 S.E.2d 463 (1993).

The transcript of the voir dire discloses gender neutral reasons for the exercise of a peremptory challenge against three of the five males struck from this jury. Juror Readdick was a former patient of the physician who allegedly performed the vasectomy upon Petitioner. (A15-16; 41). A prior relationship with a crucial witness to the defense was certainly a valid basis to exercise a strike. Juror Sowerby was an attorney in the community and admitted hearing pre-trial information concerning the case. (A21-22). Given that Petitioner is also an attorney in the same small community, and that pre-trial knowledge of the case was professed, striking Juror Sowerby was a reasoned choice. Finally, Juror Patel admitted knowing the Petitioner and having heard of the case through the media. (A12; 26). Since Juror Patel knew Petitioner, and knew about the case, Respondent had a reasonable basis for striking Juror Patel from the panel. The transcript is silent as to any voir dire answers by Jurors Pugh and Holmes.

Taking into account the marginal difference between the gender composition of the jury panel and the jury ultimately selected, it is certainly reasonable to conclude that the Petitioner failed to establish a prima facie case of discriminatory use of peremptory challenges by the Respondent. Respondent did not use all of its strikes against persons of the same gender, as the Petitioner did, and the transcript supplies neutral reasons for the striking of three of the five males excluded from the jury. Using the "relevant circumstances" analysis approved in Batson, there was no prima facie case established by Petitioner and it was not incumbent upon the trial court to require Respondent to explain the basis for its strikes. Petitioner did not "raise the inference" that purposeful discrimination had occurred. Consequently, the writ of certiorari should be denied by this Court.

II. The Georgia Superior Court Properly Held That Compelling Blood Tests In Cases Where Respondent Is Involved Satisfied Due Process and Equal Protection Guaranties And The Georgia Appellate Courts Acted Appropriately By Not Disturbing That Decision.

As an alternative ground for seeking the writ of certiorari from this Court, Petitioner argues that O.C.G.A. § 19-7-45, a statute dealing with blood testing in paternity actions, violates the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. The transgression asserted by Petitioner is that trial courts lack discretion to order blood tests in cases where Respondent is the plaintiff, whereas a trial court may elect not to order blood testing when a private party brings the action. Significantly, the statute attacked by Petitioner was adopted by the Georgia legislature in response to a Congressional mandate that such tests be available to any party who requests genetic tests in actions initiated under Title IV-D of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. § 666(a)(5)(B). Notwithstanding the Congressional mandate, the statute is not unconstitutional for the grounds alleged.

Since Petitioner fails to cite a single case supporting his position, Respondent will set forth the relevant standards for evaluating his constitutional challenge. This Court has institutionalized the method by which legislation is to be reviewed upon a constitutional challenge being made and has adopted varying degrees of scrutiny depending upon the circumstances presented by each case. Because Petitioner complains about a court procedure, he has articulated no violation of any fundamental right secured to him by the Constitution or laws.[8] Thus, the question presented below was whether procedural due process was afforded.

Neither has Petitioner shown that a suspect class is adversely impacted for purposes of an equal protection challenge.[9] Where no fundamental rights are implicated,

[8] Although Petitioner's challenge is not altogether clear, the Respondent does not understand him to complain about the fact that blood tests can be ordered by a court, or to present any type of bodily integrity argument implicating substantive due process. In any event, this Court has held that blood testing is not so substantial an invasion of the body to violate substantive due process. Schmerber v. California, 384 U.S. 757 (1966); Breithaupt v. Abram, 352 U.S. 432 (1956).

[9] At one point, Petitioner suggests that the legislation may adversely impact males. (Petition, p. 18). However, since the legislation is gender neutral and the mother of a child may also be compelled to participate in blood testing over her objection, the legislation operates uniformly against all persons from a and no suspect class is involved, legislation need only satisfy a rational relationship test; no heightened scrutiny is necessary. City of Dallas v. Stanglin, 490 U.S. 19, 23 (1989). The relevant test is: does the legislation rationally relate to a legitimate state purpose? Id. Applying this test to the legislation at hand leads inescapably to the conclusion that no constitutional violation exists. (Petition, pp. A6-8).

With respect to any claimed violation of procedural due process, the record plainly reflects that the blood test order was entered after a hearing upon a motion which Respondent filed under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-45. (Petition, p. A6). It is beyond question that Petitioner was afforded notice and an opportunity to be heard prior to entry of the order. Though Petitioner may argue that a hearing is a hollow process if the Court lacks discretion to deny the relief, he was nonetheless provided with an ample opportunity to raise any objections to the blood test or to convince the court that the action should not proceed against him based upon some other ground. He even attempted an interlocutory appeal of the lower court's ruling. (Petition, p. A15). Petitioner was provided procedural due process.

Insofar as Petitioner's equal protection claim is concerned, the statute by its terms operates uniformly as to all parties involved in the action. Blood testing will be ordered in cases where Respondent is a party regardless of whether it is requested by the putative father, the gender standpoint. The only valid comparison is between the state and private parties as plaintiffs.

custodial parent, or the Respondent. O.C.G.A. § 19-7-45. Accordingly, where paternity blood testing is concerned, the only meaningful comparison is between actions brought by Respondent, and those initiated by private parties. Valid reasons exist for treating actions brought by private individuals differently from those brought by the state.

Whereas private actions may be spurious or groundless, actions commenced by the Respondent are instituted only after careful investigation and upon valid grounds. The resources of the public are not squandered on pursuing petty domestic battles. Moreover, public policy favors the legitimacy of children, see Worthington v. Worthington, 250 Ga. 730, 301 S.E.2d 44 (1983), and contemplates that children will be supported by their parents, not the taxpayers, see Department of Human Resources v. Bagley, 240 Ga. 306, 240 S.E.2d 867 (1977). The purpose of the Title IV-D program is to recoup the drain of welfare expenditures on the federal and state treasuries, Wehunt v. Ledbetter, 875 F.2d 1558 (11th Cir. 1989), and permitting genetic testing is rationally related to the goal of establishing paternity in a scientific and reliable manner. Allowing genetic testing early in the proceedings provides an accurate yardstick by which to measure whether further public funds should be expended litigating paternity with a particular individual. See Britten v. Georgia, 173 Ga. App. 840, 328 S.E.2d 556 (1985).

Finally, in applying the rational relationship test to this legislation, it should not be overlooked that the Court is examining not only the wisdom of an act of the Georgia legislature, but the design of Congress which compelled the states to adopt mandatory blood testing provisions in connection with their Title IV-D programs. 42 U.S.C. § 666(a)(5)(B). Should the Court find the Georgia statute violative of due process or equal protection principles, its decision may impact not only Georgia's statutory scheme, but every state in the nation which by necessity must have similar legislation. Needless to say, Respondent firmly believes that the challenged legislation passes constitutional muster and that Petitioner's challenge is without merit. Consequently, the Court is urged to deny the writ of certiorari.

CONCLUSION

For all the foregoing reasons, the Petition for Writ of Certiorari should be denied, or alternatively the decision of the Supreme Court of Georgia should be summarily affirmed.

CONVENE - 9:01 A.M., MARCH 8, 1993

THE COURT: Cassel versus Tucker.

MS. SKELTON: Ready, Your Honor.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, the defendant at this time moves for a continuance on several grounds. First of all, under Rule 24 of the Uniform Rules, the plaintiff has failed to furnish the defendant with a financial affidavit; has failed to file one with the Court at least 10 days prior to trial. Under the rules, that is a ground for a continuance. We are in effect here being asked to defend a case without having been furnished very crucial information concerning the financial needs of the child if the verdict should be that way. As such, we are being ambushed. We're having to try this case under a surprise. There is no prior way that we could have done this or known about it before 10 days, because there is only a 10-day requirement. As such, on that ground, we would move for a continuance of this case until such time as the plaintiff complies with the statutory rules of procedure of the superior courts.

THE COURT: What is your next ground?

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, the next ground is that we object to the amendment of the pretrial order in this case signed by the Court a few days ago wherein the plaintiff asked for two new witnesses. In the plaintiff's [p. 3] motion, she alleged certain reasons that one employee was no longer there. The other witness was known at all times. It's not a new witness. This, again, leads us into a surprise situation. We have not had the opportunity to depose this witness or conduct any discovery as to what he might say. It only happened a few days ago. I've been tied up in depositions with a case Your Honor has set for this Friday, the Coastal Bank case. I was in federal court last week, and on two or three days' notice, to try to take a deposition and conduct discovery in North Carolina is impossible, so on that ground we would object to the Court's amendment of the pretrial order and ask for a continuance on that ground until we can engage in discovery with regard to these two new witnesses she's listed.

THE COURT: Is that all of your grounds?

MR. PALMATARY: No, sir. The next ground, we claim that the plaintiff in this case has misled this Court with regard to the two witnesses. We were belatedly furnished some type of a synopsis of some kind of a test this new witness has done very recently. The new witness, Mr. Bever, the plaintiff asked the Court to amend the pretrial court order on for the reason that the other witness was no longer employed there. However, what it turns out is, this new witness, this new expert witness, has apparently [p. 4] conducted some new tests. These new tests have not been authorized by this Court. There is no court order authorizing any additional tests. These new tests are different from the prior tests. We have not had an opportunity to conduct discovery on this or to consult with our expert as to what these new test results may be. For the record, the tests were apparently done, were conducted apparently, February 27th, which the Court will note was only like nine or 10 days ago. We did not get it for several days after that. As such, we claim surprise. No amount of diligence can prepare for a brand-new expert witness who has conducted brand-new tests within 10 days prior to the trial date. As such, we claim that we are entitled to a continuance on that ground.

Also, there is one additional ground. The plaintiff has yet a motion pending for yet another new witness. This is not a newly-discovered witness. It's one she's known all along. We have relied upon the pretrial order that's been signed in this case, our tactics and our trial procedures on how to conduct this case, and at the last minute all of the new witnesses come in, so we contend that it is impossible to conduct the defense of this case with all of the brand-new witnesses called in at the very last minute with new evidence, and leaving us without an opportunity to conduct discovery to see what they have to [p. 5] say, or to let our expert see what these new experts have to allow. As such, we contend, under the statute, that we have ample grounds for a continuance of this case. I will state in my place that I don't know what I could have done. I mean it came as a surprise to me. All these new witnesses, new tests, we were not aware of it. It's going to be impossible to defend this case without ample opportunity to see what these new experts have.

Also, one final ground, and that is, looking at the array of the jury assembled, it appears that there is a disproportionate number of female potential jurors on the list, far in excess of the statutory or the historical percentage in Glynn County, and, as such, we would challenge the array upon the statistical makeup of the jury.

THE COURT: Response?

MS. SKELTON: Your Honor, as to the financial affidavit, the State of Georgia is the plaintiff in this case.

The State has never been required to file a financial affidavit. However, if the Court would like for me to get the financial affidavit of the mother of the child, Sonja Cassel, I can do that this morning. She doesn't have any significant assets, there would be nothing significant on there at all, but I can have that done within an hour.

[p. 6] As to the amendment of the pretrial order to add Dr. Kushner and Dr. Bever, Dr. Bever is a director of the laboratory, Genetic Design, where the court-ordered blood tests were performed. The PhD who originally signed the report, Dr. McNight, is unavailable. She no longer works there. I don't have any way to subpoena her. Dr. Bever is here because of a contract he has with the State. He lives in North Carolina, and he works there, and that's how I know that I can get him here. As to Dr. Kushner, he will mainly be used as a rebuttal witness.

I didn't know what kind of tests the defendant's expert would conduct when the pretrial order was signed. I found out after it was signed that in fact she had conducted some tests that have apparently excluded Mr. Tucker as the father of this child. Based upon that, I thought it necessary to have an outside or an independent expert before the Court to compare the types of tests that were done by the court-ordered blood tests at Genetic Design and by the defendant's expert.

Furthermore, as to Dr. Bever, the defendant never attempted to take the deposition of Dr. McNight, who was originally on the pretrial order. She has been on there as long as anyone, and I've received no notice of any attempt to even interview her. As to the, quote, new tests, I believe Mr. Palmatary is speaking of two more DNA

[p. 7] probes in the same blood samples that were originally drawn that were done by Dr. Bever after he met with the expert witness for the defendant, basically to make sure that his test was right. She had an exclusion in there, and he wanted to keep testing to make sure he would be testifying, you know, that Mr. Tucker is most likely the father of this child. He did two more probes to make sure, and that's what he found, and that's what is on his report.

As to Ronald Stack, who I'm asking the Court to allow me to call as a witness, he was not on the pretrial order because I forgot him. He drew the blood at the Doctor's Laboratory here in Brunswick, packaged it and shipped it to North Carolina to Genetic Design. I apologize profusely to the Court. There is no excuse. I just forgot it. He is available here. I told Mr. Palmatary in my motion what his address is, he works not two miles from here, and there won't be any surprise testimony from him. It's a simple matter of chain of custody of some blood samples. I respectfully ask that he be added or that I be allowed to call him. Thank you.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, may I reply?

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. PALMATARY: Ms. Skelton says that Dr. McNight did the tests, but the fact that the person conducting the [p. 8] tests no longer works at the place doesn't change the fact that is the witness who has the knowledge. If Dr. Bever, who apparently did not conduct the initial tests – That's the reason he was not on there. So this is a new witness who has done a new test, and I think we're entitled to see what he's got to say, to look at his credentials. I know what Ms. McNight's credentials are. We know what she was going to say, but now we've got a brand-new guy. We don't know anything about him, we haven't had the opportunity to look into his background, we don't know what he's going to say. Again, we're totally surprised. At the last minute we've got a whole brand-new ball game here. We've got brand-new tests, apparently. She said original blood samples. Our evidence is that the original blood samples had deteriorated so much that they are not usable. It's possible that any new tests he did are void. We don't know. We think that justice dictates that we be given a fair and reasonable opportunity to know what kind of evidence is going to be coming, what's coming in this case, and we have not had a chance to do that. So, again, we respectfully move for a continuance to enable us to conduct discovery, to look in, to see what this new expert has done; what are these new tests or probes that he did, and find this out. It's very crucial to this case.

THE COURT: The expert you're talking about, that's [p. 9] for rebuttal only? Is that what you're saying, Ms. Skelton?

MR. PALMATARY: No.

MS. SKELTON: No, Your Honor. Kushner and Bever are both experts. Bever is not for rebuttal only. Bever is to testify to the blood tests that were conducted at Genetic Design. Kushner is to compare the two types of testing done by Genetic Design and done by the defendant.

THE COURT: What about Bever? Is he going to testify that he did the tests himself?

MS. SKELTON: Yes, sir, he is going to testify –

THE COURT: Did he do them first?

MS. SKELTON: No, sir.

THE COURT: Second?

MS. SKELTON: He did them second.

THE COURT: Who did them first?

MS. SKELTON: Bette McNight.

THE COURT: Was she deposed by the defendant?

MS. SKELTON: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Was any effort made to depose her?

MS. SKELTON: None that I know of.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, on Bette McNight, we have her test results, we have her resume, we conducted some investigation with her, we know what we've got with her.

[p. 10] Dr. Bever is an entirely different matter. His test results are entirely different than hers.

THE COURT: All right, he'll be made available two hours before his testimony for the defense attorney to interview him prior to trial.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, what if additional discovery or consultation with other experts is desired? We're not talking about something very simple here. We're talking about very complex –

THE COURT: You'll have a chance to interview him two hours before the trial. You have your expert, you know what he will say then, then you can go over whatever testimony you wish with your expert. The second expert they're using is for rebuttal only, and that's not grounds for a continuance, using a rebuttal witness. There is a recent case just out on that from the Supreme Court.

All right, you'll provide then a financial affidavit before 12 o'clock today, or two hours after jury selection ends.

Your motion for continuances then are denied, with the exception of your challenge to the array. I'll hear that at this time.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, I didn't hear you.

THE COURT: Your motion for continuances then are denied, and I will hear your challenge to the array that [p. 11] you mentioned.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, for the record, we would object to the Court's denial of our motion for a continuance. We say that two hours is insufficient time in which to examine experts, to review financial data, wholly insufficient to prepare for a brand-new defense of this case in two hours' time. It's highly prejudicial and unfair.

THE COURT: All right, they're noted.

MR. PALMATARY: With regard to the challenge to the array, Your Honor, according to the jury list, the computer printout which has the date of March 8th, 1993, of the initial list of 125 typed names, only 43 percent are male, 57 percent are female, and checking Friday with the clerk's office, of those who have been excused, there were like nine additional men who were excused. That leaves, apparently, this morning, of the original 125, only 36 percent of potential male jurors. As such, we would contend that on the statistical population of Glynn County, that we do not have a proper array to hear this case.

THE COURT: I'll hear any evidence you wish to offer to support your motion.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, I would submit the clerk's list, the original court records, the clerk's list [p. 12] that they keep. The court record would show that, and I would assume that the clerk has a copy of it here showing who was on the list and who has been excused.

THE COURT: Yes, and that will be part of the record. I'll hear any evidence you wish to offer.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, what I would offer is that there were excused from the list jurors number four, nine, 15, 18, 23, 29, 33, 41, 44, 45, 48, 49, 54, 58, 61, 63, 64, 69, 73, 80, 88, 98, 93, 97, 100, 116, 119.

THE COURT: Whatever the record reflects will be controlling in the case. It's filed in the record. Once again, I'll hear any evidence you wish to offer at this time.

MR. PALMATARY: Nothing else.

THE COURT: All right, your motion to challenge the array is denied. How long will this case take to try, Cassel versus Tucker?

MS. SKELTON: I think a day, Your Honor.

MR. PALMATARY: A day or a day and a half, Your Honor.

(RECESS – 9:21 A.M. TO 11:20 A.M.)

MR. PALMATARY: Prior to jury selection, if it may please the Court, we would file a motion for confidentiality.

[p. 13] (DOCUMENT GIVEN TO OPPOSING COUNSEL, THE CLERK AND THE COURT)

THE COURT: All right, I'll consider it.

(JURY PRESENT – 11:25 A.M.) (JURORS SWORN BY THE CLERK)

THE COURT: Good morning, members of the jury panel. This case will be tried Wednesday and Thursday of this week for your information. Do you any of you have a personal or a business conflict which you feel is pressing more than the average conflict that you would have by working, by serving on the jury Wednesday and Thursday? If so, would you raise your hand? We'll try to accommodate you. If you are selected to serve on the jury, you will only serve Wednesday and Thursday. If you are not selected to serve on this jury, then you will be excused for the remainder of the week when we complete jury selection in a few minutes.

(NO RESPONSE)

All right, there are none.

GENERAL VOIR DIRE:

THE COURT: Are any of you ladies and gentlemen related by blood or marriage to Daniel Cassel or to Alan D. Tucker? If so, would you please raise your hand?

(NO RESPONSE)

THE COURT: Are any of you employees of the Georgia [p. 14] Department of Human Resources? If so, would you raise your hand?

(NO RESPONSE)

THE COURT: Have any of you in the past been employees of the Georgia Department of Human Resources? If so, would you raise your hand?

JUROR WILLIAMS: I've been an employee of Georgia Natural Resources.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. Have any of you any prejudice or bias on your mind either for or against any of the parties in the case, The State of Georgia, Department of Human Resources, or Alan D. Tucker? If so, would you raise your hand?

(SHOWING OF HANDS)

THE COURT: Yes, sir, Dr. Tarplee?

JUROR TARPLEE: I know Mr. Tucker personally.

THE COURT: All right. Do you feel that because of your personal knowledge of him you could not be a fair and impartial juror in the case?

JUROR TARPLEE: I might have some difficulty.

THE COURT: All right, sir. Yes, sir?

JUROR DICKSON: I know Mr. Tucker. I've spoken with both of the lawyers. Because of my job, I have written about this case.

THE COURT: Okay, Mr. Dickson. Do you feel like you [p. 15] could not be a fair and impartial juror?

JUROR DICKSON: I have reservations about that, yes, sir.

THE COURT: All right, Mr. Dickson. Mr. Patel?

JUROR PATEL: I know Mr. Tucker. I have a retail drugstore on St. Simons.

THE COURT: Do you feel that you could be a fair and impartial juror?

JUROR PATEL: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: All right, sir. Yes, ma'am?

JUROR WILLIAMS: I know Mr. Tucker, and I've had some friendship, but I can be –

THE COURT: But you feel like you could be fair and impartial in the case, Ms. Williams?

JUROR WILLIAMS: Yes, I could.

THE COURT: Okay. I'll hear any objection as far as Mr. Dickson or Dr. Tarplee, either one. Ms. Skelton?

MS. SKELTON: No, Your Honor. I have talked to Mr. Dickson about this case before I ever knew he was going to be on the jury.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Palmatary?

MR. PALMATARY: We've got no problem with either one of them, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Do you feel like this would place you in an untenable situation, having to serve on the jury? Look [p. 16] at yourself as if you were on the other side of the case, on the other side of the case from Mr. Tucker. Would you feel comfortable with a juror such as yourself serving on the jury, Dr. Tarplee?

JUROR TARPLEE: I can't answer that, Judge Taylor. I can only say that I know him, I'm somewhat familiar with the issues, I have strong feelings.

THE COURT: All right, sir. Well, I think it probably be best. I'll excuse you, okay, and you won't have to serve on any other jury, and you can go.

Mr. Dickson, I'm going to excuse you also from the panel, and you do not have to come back for any jury service. You can leave.

(JUROR TARPLEE AND JUROR DICKSON WITHDREW FROM THE COURTROOM)

THE COURT: To the remaining members of the panel, are your minds perfectly impartial between the parties in this case, the plaintiff and the defendant? If not, raise your hand.

(NO RESPONSE)

THE COURT: Do any of you have any desire or preference as to which party should prevail – that is, which party should win – either the plaintiff or the defendant? I'll explain to you that this is an action brought by the Department of Human Resources, on behalf of [p. 17]

Daniel Cassel, against Mr. Tucker, to determine paternity; that is, whether or not Mr. Tucker is the father of Daniel Cassel. If the jury should determine yes, then it would also be in a position to have to determine any support payments due. If not, then that would end the deliberation in the case. Now with that in mind, I'll ask you again: Do any of you have any prejudice or bias on your mind, is your mind perfectly impartial between the parties, or do any of you have any desire or preference as to which party should prevail? Having done that, you will answer the question. If so, raise your hand.

(NO RESPONSE)

THE COURT: Thank you. Are any of you now represented by Ms. Mary Skelton, who is seated here at counsel table representing the State? Are any of you represented by her?

(NO RESPONSE)

THE COURT: Are any of you represented at this time by Mr. Carroll Palmatary? Mr. Palmatary represents Mr. Tucker.

(NO RESPONSE)

THE COURT: Are any of you at the present time being represented by Mr. Tucker? If so, would you raise your hand?

(NO RESPONSE)

[p. 18] THE COURT: Ms. Cassel, what is your first name?

MS. SKELTON: Sonja.

THE COURT: Do any of you know Ms. Sonja Cassel, who is seated here with Ms. Skelton? If so, would you raise your hand?

(NO RESPONSE)

THE COURT: Have any of you in the past been represented by Ms. Skelton, Mr. Palmatary or Mr. Tucker as an attorney? If so, would you raise your hand?

(NO RESPONSE)

THE COURT: Ms. Skelton, you may voir dire the jury.

VOIR DIRE BY MS. SKELTON:

MS. SKELTON: Thank you, Your Honor. Good morning. My name is Mary Skelton. I represent the Child Support Recovery Office, which is part of the Georgia Department of Human Resources, in this case. I just have a few questions to ask you. Are any of you personal friends with either Mr. Alan Tucker or Mr. Carroll Palmatary?

(NO RESPONSE)

MS. SKELTON: Thank you. None of you have been represented by either of them. That's right. Okay. Are any of you a patient or a friend of a Dr. Carl Drury, or have you been a patient of Dr. Carl Drury in the past?

(SHOWING OF HANDS)

MS. SKELTON: Yes, sir? What is your name?

[p. 19] JUROR READDICK: Readdick, Ivan Readdick.

MS. SKELTON: And you have been a patient of Dr. Drury?

JUROR READDICK: Yes.

MS. SKELTON: Thank you. Mr. Readdick, if Dr. Drury testifies in this case, do you think that you would be more inclined to believe him than anyone else?

JUROR READDICK: Not necessarily, no.

MS. SKELTON: Thank you. Is there anyone on this panel who – If the Judge instructs you somewhere along in the trial that a child born out of wedlock, not in a marriage, deserves the support and by law should be given the support of both parents, is there anyone here who would believe that the child is not owed a duty of support by a father who was not married to the mother?

(NO RESPONSE)

MS. SKELTON: I know I garbled that up. Did everybody understand me?

(AFFIRMATIVE INDICATION)

MS. SKELTON: Okay, thank you. Do any of you either pay child support or receive child support now?

(SHOWING OF HANDS)

MS. SKELTON: Okay, let's start up here. Ms. Williams?

JUROR WILLIAMS: Yes, my husband pays child support.

[p. 20] MS. SKELTON: Does he pay through the Child Support Recovery Office?

JUROR WILLIAMS: Yes, ma'am.

MS. SKELTON: Anyone else up here? Who raised their hand? Yes, ma'am?

JUROR BAGGS: My children's father pays child support directly.

MS. SKELTON: And what is your name?

JUROR BAGGS: Darlene Baggs.

MS. SKELTON: But he doesn't pay through the child support office?

JUROR BAGGS: No.

MS. SKELTON: Anyone else? Yes, ma'am, what is your name?

JUROR DUNCAN: Sheila Duncan.

MS. SKELTON: Ms. Duncan, do you receive child support?

JUROR DUNCAN: Yes, I do.

MS. SKELTON: Is it through the Child Support Recovery Office?

JUROR DUNCAN: No, it's not.

MS. SKELTON: Thank you. Anyone else?

JUROR LOGUE: I need to ask you a question. I have been represented by Mr. Palmatary before.

MS. SKELTON: You have been represented by Mr. [p. 21] Palmatary. What is your name, ma'am?

JUROR LOGUE: Wynell Logue.

MS. SKELTON: Logue?

JUROR LOGUE: Un-huh.

MS. SKELTON: How long ago was it?

JUROR LOGUE: About eight years ago.

MS. SKELTON: Do you think you would be more inclined to go on his side of this case due to his past representation?

JUROR LOGUE: No, ma'am.

MS. SKELTON: Okay. Thank you.

THE COURT: Yes, ma'am, do you want to say something?

JUROR UTZ: Yes, sir.

MS. SKELTON: I'm sorry.

JUROR UTZ: I didn't realize that Mr. Tucker, when you first introduced him, was a lawyer in this area. My neighbor was represented by him in a very difficult case. I didn't know what he looked like. I don't know whether I could be really impartial.

MS. SKELTON: You're Ms. Utz?

JUROR UTZ: Uh-huh.

MS. SKELTON: Because of what your neighbor told you about her case?

JUROR UTZ: Uh-huh, and the fact that she went to prison would make it real hard for me to be impartial.

[p. 22] MS. SKELTON: Okay. Do you already know which way you would vote in this case, Ms. Utz?

JUROR UTZ: No. I don't know anything about the case.

MS. SKELTON: But once you do, you're still not sure if that would affect your judgment?

JUROR UTZ: She said a lot of things about Mr. Tucker, so it would make it very difficult for me to be impartial.

MS. SKELTON: Okay. Thank you.

I just have one more question for you. In a case like this, involving paternity, obviously intimate questions are going to have to be asked these witnesses, personal, private questions that you and I don't usually talk about in public. Is there anyone here that would feel so uncomfortable about that kind of testimony that they feel now that they couldn't be a proper member of the jury?

(NO RESPONSE)

Thank you. That's all, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, Mr. Palmatary –

MS. SKELTON: I'm sorry, Your Honor. I'm sorry? Mr. Sowerby?

JUROR SOWERBY: I have a relative in Glynn County whose last name is Cassel, and I don't know if this [p. 23] plaintiff is related to her or not. Her first name is Marjorie.

MS. CASSEL: (Negative Indication)

MS. SKELTON: No? Okay. Thank you.

THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Sowerby.

VOIR DIRE BY MR. PALMATARY:

MR. PALMATARY: Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. I'm Carroll Palmatary. I represent Mr. Tucker in this case. As Ms. Skelton indicated to you, this involves some very personal matters, and when I'm asking you these questions I am not trying to pry into anything personal, but these are things we need to know from you folks. Before we get into that, have any of you ever been represented by Grayson Lane, Bob Crowe, or Don Napier, or are you friends with any of those gentlemen?

JUROR STEPHENS: With Bob Crowe.

MR. PALMATARY: And what is your name?

JUROR STEPHENS: Tamara Stephens.

MR. PALMATARY: How well do you know Mr. Crowe?

JUROR STEPHENS: I know him and his wife.

MR. PALMATARY: You're social friends?

JUROR STEPHENS: Yes.

MR. PALMATARY: Have you heard anything about this case? Has he discussed anything about this case?

JUROR STEPHENS: No. I haven't seen him in awhile.

[p. 24] MR. PALMATARY: Pardon?

JUROR STEPHENS: I haven't seen him in awhile.

JUROR PATEL: The Crowes shop at the drugstore.

MR. PALMATARY: Is that your only connection, Mr. Patel; is that they shop at your drugstore?

JUROR PATEL: Yes.

MR. PALMATARY: Mr. Sowerby?

MR. SOWERBY: As an attorney, I know all the attorneys in town. Before I answer I might hear the questions.

MR. PALMATARY: But you know them as attorneys, not as close personal friends or social friends, just the bar association?

MR. SOWERBY: I know Bob Crowe on a personal level. We don't do anything together.

MR. PALMATARY: Mr. Sowerby, have you heard any comments regarding this case?

JUROR SOWERBY: Yes.

MR. PALMATARY: You have?

JUROR SOWERBY: Yes.

MR. PALMATARY: You have prior knowledge of the facts or the allegations in this case?

JUROR SOWERBY: Yes.

MR. PALMATARY: Have you discussed them with other members of the bar or court personnel?

[p. 25] JUROR SOWERBY: Yes.

MR. PALMATARY: Do you feel you might have knowledge of this case or facts that may not come out in evidence in this case by virtue of your prior conversation?

JUROR SOWERBY: That is possible, yes.

MR. PALMATARY: Do you feel you could sit as a fair and impartial juror in this case having knowledge of these facts?

JUROR SOWERBY: I would hope that my legal education and seven years of experience would allow me to separate any rumors or gossip that I may have heard from any evidence that may be presented.

MR. PALMATARY: Mr. Sowerby, sitting as a juror, though, and not as an attorney, do you think that your having knowledge of these facts would have some impact?

JUROR SOWERBY: Honestly, I would make my best effort not to let it have any impact, and I don't think it would. Of course I suppose it could be possible.

MR. PALMATARY: Does anyone else have any knowledge of Mr. Napier or Mr. Lane or Mr. Crowe?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: Now I want to ask you about some witnesses that may be called to testify in this case, and ask if any of you know those witnesses or know anything about them: a Barbara Shivers?

[p. 26] (NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: Tonya Bennett?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: Faye Cassel – Mr. Sowerby?

JUROR SOWERBY: Tonya Bennett, a legal secretary, and Faye Cassel, who works in the clerk's office.

MR. PALMATARY: Yes.

MR. SOWERBY: I know them.

MR. PALMATARY: Grace Owens.

JUROR YARBROUGH: Grace Owens?

MR. PALMATARY: Yes.

JUROR YARBROUGH: Does she work at Adventure Travel?

MR. PALMATARY: No. She works at the law firm of Grayson Lane.

JUROR YARBROUGH: No, sir, that's not her.

MR. PALMATARY: Elise Hannah.

JUROR WILLIAMS: Yes, sir. They used to live right around the corner from us, and I work for the same company that she does, but we work in different departments.

MR. PALMATARY: Where do you live, Ms. Williams?

JUROR WILLIAMS: Well, we used to live on Hampton Point.

THE COURT: Ms. Stephens raised her hand, too, Mr. Palmatary.

JUROR STEPHENS: I know Elise.

[p. 27] MR. PALMATARY: Okay. Greg Lennox?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: Sidney Kushner?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: A Mr. Ronald Stack of Doctors' Laboratory here in Brunswick?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: Robert Bever, from North Carolina.

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: Do any of you have a family member or are you employed by or work with the Department of Family and Children's Services or DEFACS, as it's called?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: The State of Georgia Child Recovery Unit, Child Support Recovery Unit?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: The Child Support Receiver's Office in conjunction with the clerk of this court?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: I will ask if any of you had heard either through the media or television about this case approximately a year ago?

(SHOWING OF HANDS)

Mr. Sowerby?

JUROR SOWERBY: Yes, I heard about it in the paper.

[p. 28] MR. PALMATARY: Ms. Logue?

JUROR LOGUE: In the papers, and also a lot of talk.

MR. PALMATARY: You had some prior knowledge, or you've heard talk about this case?

JUROR LOGUE: No, I've just heard people discussing it, because it was something different, I guess.

MR. PALMATARY: Have you formed any opinion?

JUROR LOGUE: I don't know.

MR. PALMATARY: Yes, ma'am?

JUROR DAVIS: I've just heard through the media.

MR. PALMATARY: Through the media?

JUROR DAVIS: Uh-huh. I haven't formed any opinion.

MR. PALMATARY: And your name is?

JUROR DAVIS: Joan Davis.

MR. PALMATARY: Yes?

JUROR WILLIAMS: Just through the media.

MR. PALMATARY: How many of you – Yes?

JUROR PATEL: Through the media.

MR. PALMATARY: How many in this panel (indicating) have any medical training? Mr. Patel of course –

MR. PALMATARY: Ms. –

JUROR TUCKER: I'm Janice Tucker.

MR. PALMATARY: Yes, Ms. Tucker, you're –

JUROR TUCKER: A registered nurse.

MR. PALMATARY: You work at the hospital; right?

[p. 29] JUROR TUCKER: Yes, sir.

MR. PALMATARY: Okay. Ms. Crosby, I believe?

JUROR CROSBY: Yes. I'm a registered nurse. I work for home health.

MR. PALMATARY: You work for who?

JUROR CROSBY: A home health, Healthmaster.

MR. PALMATARY: Okay. And in this panel back here? The gentleman on the end next to Mr. Sowerby?

JUROR BROOKS: Basic first aid program.

MR. PALMATARY: And where did you receive your training, sir?

JUROR BROOKS: Arkansas Law Enforcement Training Academy.

MR. PALMATARY: No other formal training other than just the advanced First Aid and Lifesaving?

JUROR BROOKS: No, sir.

MR. PALMATARY: Have any of you had any training or advanced courses in either botany, zoology or genetics, or any laboratory training in those areas? Mr. Sowerby?

JUROR SOWERBY: I have no formal training. However, I am very familiar with the principles of histo-compatibility and immunology that will be presented in this case.

MR. PALMATARY: Okay. Anything beyond the pharmacy level, sir?

[p. 30] JUROR PATEL: No.

MR. PALMATARY: Anyone else, in botany, zoology or genetics?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: How about statistics or higher math? Does anyone have – Yes, sir?

JUROR BROOKS: Basic statistics in graduate school.

MR. PALMATARY: And that was where; Arkansas?

JUROR BROOKS: Yes, and Clayton in Missouri.

MR. PALMATARY: Okay, and your name, sir?

JUROR BROOKS: Stephen Brooks.

MR. PALMATARY: Is that Creighton, in Nebraska?

JUROR BROOKS: Clayton, St Louis, Missouri.

MR. PALMATARY: Clayton. Thank you. And what is your occupation, Mr. Brooks?

JUROR BROOKS: I'm a training instructor at the Federal Law Enforcement Academy.

MR. PALMATARY: I believe Ms. Skelton asked this question. I think you all answered whether you are either paying or receiving child support. If not you, does any member of your family, of your immediate family, either a spouse, or a daughter or someone, do they pay or receive child support?

JUROR WILLIAMS: Yes, we pay.

MR. PALMATARY: Okay, I believe you've already [p. 31] answered that.

JUROR WILLIAMS: Uh-huh.

MR. PALMATARY: Mr. Sowerby?

JUROR SOWERBY: My sister receives child support.

JUROR BROOKS: (Hand raised)

MR. PALMATARY: You're Mr. Brooks?

MR. BROOKS: Yes, sir.

JUROR UTZ: My sister is supposed to.

MR. PALMATARY: Okay. Let me ask this panel, have any of you or any member of your family, close or immediate family, ever either brought or had brought against you a paternity case, any question about paternity? Yes, ma'am?

JUROR CROOKS: I have.

MR. PALMATARY: Did you bring the case?

JUROR CROOKS: Yes.

MR. PALMATARY: And your name is?

JUROR CROOKS: Cheryl Crooks.

MR. PALMATARY: Crooks, okay, and was that here in Glynn County?

JUROR CROOKS: Yes.

MR. PALMATARY: Did you use the State, or did you have a private attorney?

JUROR CROOKS: Private.

MR. PALMATARY: A private attorney?

[p. 32] JUROR CROOKS: Yes.

MR. PALMATARY: Anybody in this panel (indicating)?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: How many of you are married in this panel?

(SHOWING OF HANDS)

MR. PALMATARY: And in this panel, how many are married or have ever been married?

(SHOWING OF HANDS)

MR. PALMATARY: Over here, those that are not now, have you been?

(SHOWING OF HANDS)

MR. PALMATARY: How many of you have children?

(SHOWING OF HANDS)

MR. PALMATARY: And in this panel?

(SHOWING OF HANDS)

MR. PALMATARY: Thank you. Now I guess we get to the personal questions. I need to ask you about your feelings on either pro-life or pro-choice, sterilization, birth control. Does anyone in this panel have either any personal beliefs or any religious beliefs against birth control?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: How about sterilization? Are any of you –

[p. 33] THE COURT: Why don't you ask if anyone is opposed to it?

MR. PALMATARY: Is anyone opposed to birth control?

THE COURT: On this panel here (indicating), this panel?

(NO RESPONSE)

MS. SKELTON: Everyone is in favor of birth control on this panel? Is that correct?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: This panel back here? Who is opposed to birth control? Does anyone have any feelings or opposition to birth control?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: Does anyone of this panel, or any member of your family or immediate friends? Have they ever had any sterilization procedure as a method of birth control? Do you know anyone that's used sterilization? Yes?

JUROR DAVIS: Are you talking about using?

MR. PALMATARY: Yes, ma'am.

JUROR DAVIS: Like vasectomies? Is that what you're talking about?

MR. PALMATARY: Yes, or tubal ligation or any other form. You're all familiar with that. Does anyone have any objection to that form of birth control?

[p. 34] (NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: How about on this panel?

THE COURT: What is the question?

MR. PALMATARY: Does anyone have any objection to sterilization as a form of birth control, either tubal ligation, vasectomy, or other types of surgical sterilization?

(NO RESPONSE)

MR. PALMATARY: Has anyone here not served on a jury before? How many? Is this the first time –

THE COURT: That's a question we won't go into.

MR. PALMATARY: Thank you. One other question. Ms. Utz, I think you said you had some prior knowledge of this case.

JUROR UTZ: No, not of this case, just of Mr. Tucker.

MR. PALMATARY: That's right. The neighbor, your neighbor. Do you feel that that knowledge would prevent you from acting fairly and impartially in this case? Could you totally remove that from your mind?

JUROR UTZ: No, because it's years of her –

THE COURT: Just answer yes or no.

JUROR UTZ: No, I don't think I could.

MR. PALMATARY: You could not be impartial?

JUROR UTZ: (Negative Indication)

MR. PALMATARY: I'd ask that she be excused for cause [p. 35] then, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Ms. Utz, I'll excuse you then. You do not have to report back to the jury room. You can just go. Thank you.

(JUROR UTZ WITHDREW FROM THE COURTROOM)

THE COURT: Anything else?

MS. SKELTON: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. I'll give you a couple of minutes to look over your jury list.

(SHORT RECESS)

THE COURT: Ladies and gentlemen, we'll call the names of the jurors who have been excused. Please remain seated until we have completed calling the names.

Will you all travel through verdict with as few as 10 or 11 if one or two become incapacitated? Ms. Skelton?

MS. SKELTON: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. Palmatary?

MR. PALMATARY: We prefer 12, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Twenty-eight, 29 and 30 jurors. Each side has one strike for one alternate.

(SILENT JURY STRIKES)

THE COURT: Call the names of the jurors that have been excused.

THE CLERK: Tamara Stephens, Cheryl Crooks, Vernon [p. 36] Pugh, Dawn Slowikowski, Pat Patel, Mabel Gibbs, Sybil Morris, Darlene Baggs, Jason Holmes, Vince Sowerby, Ivan Readdick, Mary Bowen, Anita Callaway, Wynell Logue.

THE COURT: Those of you whose names were called are excused. Thank you. You may go at this time. You do not have to go back to the jury assembly room.

Members of the jury, would you please have a seat in the jury box, please?

(COMPLIED)

THE COURT: Ladies and gentlemen, you've been selected as the jury to try this case, and the law requires that I give you the following instructions. More importantly, it requires that you follow these instructions. From this point forward, you cannot discuss the case with anyone whatsoever until you are in the jury room deliberating upon your verdict in the case. At that time you are only permitted to discuss the case among your fellow jurors. You cannot talk about it until your service as jurors has concluded. I know the natural tendency is, when you go home at night, some member of your household may want to know what happened in court today, and if anyone can influence you, certainly it's a member of your household, but they aren't hearing the evidence and they don't know what's taking place, so please tell them you can't discuss it until it's over. [p. 37] You can talk about it all you want to at that time. If anyone should attempt to talk with you about it, you must report it to me immediately.

The case will begin Wednesday morning at nine o'clock. I'll ask you to report back about five minutes till nine. Come up the front stairs and take a left down the hallway where you just came into the courtroom. Don't come in the courtroom. Just go straight through the chambers area here back into the jury room. Paul will be outside, if you have any questions. He is the security bailiff assigned to you, and he will direct your attention, or Sergeant Taschotti, one, will be out front. One of the two of them will be out front so you all can find them. I'll ask you to go into the jury room, and Paul will give you further instructions at that time and answer any questions.

Before you leave, please write your name and all telephone numbers where we can reach you day and night on the pad in the jury room, so if it's necessary for us to call you or get in touch with you, we'll have your numbers where we can reach you. Be on time. It's a $50 fine if you're late and we have to wait for you. I'll see you Wednesday morning at five minutes till nine.

(THE JURORS WITHDREW FROM THE COURTROOM AT 12:18 P.M.)

[p. 38] THE COURT: I'll hear any argument on your motion on confidentiality, Mr. Palmatary.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, this case by its very merits is going to involve medical procedures by both parties, it's going to involve their medical records, it's going to have testimony concerning the personal medical conditions of these parties. There has already been enough publicity on this case. As I understand the rumors, they're trying to sell tickets to the trial. I think that this type of case should be conducted with dignity and not made a spectacle. For that reason, we think that it would be in the best interests of the parties and the child that the case be held in a closed scenario or closed scene.

THE COURT: Ms. Skelton?

MS. SKELTON: I have no objection to Mr. Palmatary's motion, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I can assure you it won't be a spectacle as long as I am presiding. The only problem is that I have denied two others to two other attorneys and their families here based on the same motion within the last year, Mr. Palmatary. The act of confidentiality was passed in 1980, and a lot of the law has changed since '80, not specifically this, but the public's access to the courts has changed, so out of an abundance of caution I am [p. 39] going to deny the motion.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, one additional, for the record. With regard to my prior motion of the array of jury and the number of men and the number of females, we'd like to object that the plaintiff in this case has systematically and arbitrarily used her peremptory strikes to strike almost all males from the array, leaving the jury constituted with a substantial majority of females versus males. I believe it's eight females and four males on the jury panel selected. As such, we would again renew our objection to the array and the panel we had to choose from.

THE COURT: Ms. Skelton, any response?

MS. SKELTON: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, it's noted.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, we'd like to find out also what time counsel will have Dr. Bever present tomorrow so we can examine him. She indicated that maybe she couldn't get him here until tomorrow night.

MS. SKELTON: I haven't had a chance to call him. I just called him and said don't get on the plane today. I left that message with him. Would any time after two or three o'clock be okay, Mr. Palmatary?

MR. PALMATARY: I'd prefer to have him in the morning, Your Honor. There won't be much time to talk.

[p. 40] THE COURT: Get him here as soon as possible.

MS. SKELTON: Yes, sir.

(RECESS – 12:21 P.M. MARCH 8, 1993)

CONVENE – 9:00 A.M., MARCH 10. 1993

THE COURT: Is there anything you wish to cover before we start?

MR. PALMATARY: Yes, Your Honor, the defense does.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, I have a motion in limine that I'd like to file this morning with the Court, if it may please the Court. There are a couple of other motions we'd like to renew and continue also.

THE COURT: Go right ahead.

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, first of all, at this time we would like to renew our motion for a continuance. Dr. Bever was not made available to us until approximately 3:15 yesterday afternoon. We covered a lot of material. It appears that he has conducted still another test after the one in February, one dated March the 5th that has, again, different findings. We have not had ample or opportune time in the last 12 or 13 hours to review those tests, and, as such, we think it's highly prejudicial and unfair to the defendant to be forced to go to trial on such short notice, so we renew our motion for a

[p. 84] Q Did you bring with you your file, Sonja Cassel's file?

A Yes, I did.

Q Are you the custodian of that file?

A Yes, I am.

Q Is that file a business record?

A Yes, it is.

Q Is that record kept in the normal course of business at the Department?

A Yes, it is.

Q Ms. Shivers, can you tell us from what period of time to what period of time Ms. Cassel received AFDC?

A Ms. Cassel applied for assistance on 11/28/90. At that time she was pregnant, and she applied for Medicaid right from the start, Medicaid for herself for the delivery of the baby.

Q Was she granted that?

A Yes, she was.

Q And was she asked who the father of her child was?

A At the time that she applied, when she came in for her interview, at that time she was asked at that time who was the father of the child.

Q And what was her response?

A She responded that Mr. Tucker, Mr. Alan Tucker, was the father but he did not acknowledge the child.

* * *

[p. 160] THE COURT: Overruled. He can answer the question.

Q What is the paternity index?

A I need to see that report that you took from me earlier.

Q I'm sorry, I apologize. I've got too many pieces of paper.

A Ms. Skelton, I have it. I'm sorry.

Q Great.

A The paternity index, based on the six DNA probes that I examined, is 206,624 to 1.

Q And what does that mean?

A It means that based on these six probes and on this evidence, that Alan David Tucker is 206,624 times more likely to be the biological father of Daniel Bryan Cassel than a random untested man that is not related in the North American Caucasian population. So he's 206,624 times more likely to be the father of this child as compared to a random North American Caucasian man.

Q So what you're saying is – correct me if I'm wrong –

MR. PALMATARY: Your Honor, we object. She's leading the witness.

THE COURT: All right.

A Another way of saying this is the woman would have had to have had relations with 206,624 men during her gestation [p. 161] cycle to have had a child of this genetic makeup.

Q And have you formed an opinion based on your work as to the probability of paternity in this case?

A Yes. Based on the probability of paternity – and the probability of paternity, as I stated, takes in two factors, non-genetic evidence and the genetic evidence. The AABB recommends and the State of Georgia recommends that we use a .5 prior probability. At least that's what's in our contract. The .5 prior probability – a prior probability is non-genetic evidence – it can go anywhere from a zero to a one. A one is that if you actually saw the sperm entering the ovum under the microscope, was planted into the woman. A .5 is a neutral assessment. They had sex, they didn't have sex. The woman says that they had sex, the man says they didn't have sex. We are a neutral, unbiased party. That's why we put in a .5. Now .1 would be a situation where you've got many partners involved with this woman. She's had relations with many men. We'd plug in a .1. Zero would be one where they had absolutely zero access to each other. They were physically separated would be a zero. So we can put in different numbers, if need be. On this report we put in a .5 because it's a neutral assessment, and it's along the guidelines of the AABB. But a .5 prior probability, the probability of paternity is greater than 99.99 percent that he is the father of the child, so that's the probability of paternity.

[p. 232] CROSS-EXAMINATION OF DR. DRURY BY MS. SKELTON:

Q Dr. Drury, would there be any reason for Mr. Tucker to have been concerned about birth control after February the 4th of 1990, as far as himself?

A I wouldn't think so.

Q You would not think so?

A No. After he was sterilized, no, he wouldn't be.

Q So he could have sexual intercourse without the worry of impregnating whoever he was having intercourse with?

A Yes, that's right.

Q It shouldn't have been a concern?

A It shouldn't have been a concern.

Q Okay. Dr. Drury, do you remember the dates of every surgical procedure you've performed in the last three years?

A Of course not.

Q How many do you think you've performed?

A Lots. I'll do an average of probably three or four or five a week.

Q All right, so let's say four a week for 52 weeks. That's 108 (sic) a year for three years. That's over 300 procedures in three years. Would that be right?

A I'm sure at least that many, maybe more.

Q Of those approximately 300 procedures, how many files have you lost?

[p. 233] A I haven't lost very many files, but the hospital has lost files. I was speaking with a psychologist awhile ago, they don't have many patients, but she's lost files. Files get lost. This file was lost totally unintentionally. I had the file, I thought, in a special place where I could keep it under my observation and not have to look for it when I was getting calls about it. The file got lost. It was a totally unforeseen and unplanned occurrence. You can make something of it if you want to, but there's nothing there.

Q Dr. Drury, you say you used your file that's now lost to help Mr. Palmatary and Mr. Tucker prepare two affidavits?

A Yes.

Q So you had it then?

A I had it then.

Q And then you came for a deposition at Mr. Palmatary's office on July 15th, 1992; is that right?

A That's right.

Q But you didn't have your file then?

A That's right.

Q And you don't have it now?

A And I don't have it now.

Q You're a personal friend of Alan's, are you not?

A Yes.

Q Did you all ever have lunch together?

A Yes.

[p. 234] Q Do You feel for him in this situation, Dr. Drury?

A Yes. I know he's been falsely accused.

Q Have you ever been falsely accused of the same thing?

A Yes, I sure was.

Q And for that reason –

A And the man who falsely accused me, or the people who did, they finally admitted it, and the real father is on the birth certificate.

Q So because you've been in his same position, you feel for him even more, don't you?

A No.

Q No?

A Let me tell you, I wouldn't lie for Alan or you or anyone here. This is what happened. Alan could not be the father of that child, period, paragraph.

Q Could you have given him this vasectomy, instead of in January of '90, in January of '91?

A No. I read it right directly out of my file to Mr. Palmatary and to Mr. Tucker.

Q Do you remember after you gave him or before you gave him the vasectomy any instructions you gave him about taking care of himself?

A Yes.

Q What do you think you told him?

A Well, I know that I told him to put an ice-bag on it, [p. 235] to go and take it easy; if he had any more pain than an aspirin would take care of, to call me. It shouldn't be that traumatic a procedure.

Q Did you ask him to be as inactive as possible?

A Yes.

Q Did you ask him not to lift anything, or do any kind of strenuous work, or run, or jog, or be on his feet a lot?

A Yes, I did all that. I asked him to stretch out and watch TV and do much of nothing.

Q And it's your testimony that you gave Mr. Tucker a vasectomy on January the 9th, is that right, of 1990?

A Yes.

Q And what day of the week was that according to this calendar?

A According to that calendar, it was a Tuesday.

Q Would you have thought that Mr. Tucker would go snow-ski two or three days later?

A I would have wished he hadn't, but I've known people to be more foolish than that and be more active than that. That is unwise, but it's certainly not unheard of, if that's your point.

Q Is it advisable?

A Oh, it's not advisable, but, you know, you're not in great pain. It's a simple procedure. You don't lose more than a drop or so of blood. That's no big deal. You shouldn't be [p. 236] terribly active, but, you know, some people, you just can't slow them down with a rope, hardly.

Q Would a seven- or eight-hour drive two or three days after a vasectomy have been a comfortable situation?

A It shouldn't have hurt, but it wouldn't be a wise thing to do. I mean you're just tempting it to hurt, but it shouldn't.

Q Do you know whether or not Mr. Tucker went skiing that next few days?

A I have no idea at all what Mr. Tucker did after that. I know he brought me a specimen, as I asked him to, in about a month or so.

Q So you don't have a record of that sperm check, either, do you?

A It was in the chart.

Q I see. Thank you, Doctor.

MS. SKELTON: That's all the questions I have.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION OF DR. DRURY

BY MR. PALMATARY:

Q One or two more questions, Doctor. First, where did you do this procedure?

A In my office.

Q Is that where most vasectomies are performed?

A Probably most are performed in offices.

Q And timewise, how long does the procedure take?

* * *

[p. 342] All right, you can retire and continue your deliberations.

(THE JURY RETIRED TO THE JURY ROOM TO CONTINUE DELIBERATING ITS VERDICT AT 2:51 P.M.)

EXCEPTIONS TO THE RECHARGE OF THE COURT:

THE COURT: I'll hear any exceptions by the plaintiff.

MS. SKELTON: None, your Honor.

THE COURT: Any exception by the defendant?

MR. PALMATARY: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, that case is recessed awaiting the jury verdict.

(RECESS AWAITING THE VERDICT – 2:52 P.M.)

(JURY PRESENT – 3:22 P.M.)

VERDICT OF THE JURY:

THE COURT: Mr. Muir, has the jury arrived at a verdict in the case?

THE FOREMAN: Yes, they have, sir.

THE COURT: And was it unanimous?

THE FOREMAN: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Would you read your verdict, please, sir?

THE FOREMAN: We the jury find as follows: Alan D. Tucker is the father of Daniel Cassell [sic]. Yes.

We the jury unanimously decided we award child [p. 343] support as follows: Three hundred and forty-five dollars per month; Mr. Alan D. Tucker to provide medical insurance and pay fifty percent of all medical expenses not covered by insurance.

THE COURT: Is it dated and signed by you?

THE FOREMAN: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: All right. Be there any desire to inspect the verdict or poll the jury by either party?

MS. SKELTON: Not by the plaintiff, Your Honor.

MR. PALMATARY: No, your Honor, not by the defendant.

THE COURT: All right, would you file that with the clerk?

Ladies and gentlemen, I can discharge you from any further consideration of the case. If you want to talk about it now, you are at liberty to talk about it. Before you leave, though, I'd ask you, if you would, to step to the jury room for just a few minutes, and I'll see you in there before you leave.

(JURY OFFICIALLY DISCHARGED AT 3:26 P.M.)

THE COURT: Get me a judgment and I'll sign it, okay?

MS. SKELTON: Thank you, Your Honor. I have a motion to present to the Court relating to cost.

THE COURT: Okay, I'll entertain that in a few minutes after we take a break.
